Practical Halacha - Shnayim mikra v'echad targum

What?

The Sages instituted a sedra review known as shenayim mikra v'echad Targum. This means two readings of the text and one of the translation of Onkelos. The text itself must be read twice followed by Onkelos translation. The preferred thing to do is to study Rashi's commentary in addition to Targum. If one does not have time for both, however, most poskim agree that Targum takes precedence over Rashi.

When?

I'chatchilah there are four time slots to fulfill this mitzvah. They are listed in order of preference:

1. Doing all three readings on erev Shabbos, or beginning them during the week and finishing them on erev Shabbos. Mishna Berura rules that one may begin reading the weekly portion immediately after Mincha of the previous Shabbos.
2. Completing the readings on Shabbos morning before Shacharis.
3. Completing the readings before the Shabbos morning meal.
4. Completing the readings before Shabbos Mincha.

B'diavad, if one did not finish his readings before Mincha on Shabbos, he may finish them until Tuesday night of the following week. One should complete his readings before beginning the new week's portion. Some poskim are even more lenient and allow one to make up an incomplete parashah until the next Simchas Torah. Since both of these deadlines are "makeup times," they are not to be relied on I'chatchila.

Good Shabbos,
Rabbi Cohen
