PRACTICAL HALACHA - PRAYER ON SHABBOS

After davening on 'leil Shabbat' everyone recites together 'vayechulu.' This is done standing as it is like testimony to the creation of the world, and witnesses stand to testify. For this reason also at least two people should say it. However if one is alone he can say it as if he was reading Torah.

After 'vayechulu' the chazan says a synopsis of the other blessings of the Amida. This was instituted to give time to those who came late to services to conclude their tefillah. The tzibur stands for the recitation of this blessing and it is customary for them to recite the passage of 'Magen Avos' before the chazan who then repeats it.

If you are davening alone, you may say 'Magen Avos,' but not the remainder of the brocho.

'Magen Avos' is recited every Shabbos of the year with the exception of the first day of pacer that falls on Shabbos. The reason for this is that the first night of Pesach is considered a protected night in which we fear no harm, therefore we are not concerned for one who is left alone in the synagogue after prayers.

The 'Magen Avos' is only said in a place where there is a regular minyan for the reason mentioned above.

Good Shabbos,
Rabbi Cohen
